

Abstract

An electrical capacitor is disclosed that includes a mixture of electrically conductive particles and non-conductive particles placed between two parallel conductive plates. The electrically conductive particles are also magnetic. By exposing the mixture of particles to a magnetic field, the electrically conductive particles have been oriented to provide a conductive network.